

2023 ELECTION

Our Democratic Morris County Candidates

A father of four, small business owner, and lifelong resident of Morris County, Jonathan Sackett is the voice we need. His background in economics, finance, and accounting and his experience as a local business owner provide both the understanding and real-life experience to tackle fiscal and quality-of-life issues.

Jonathan is serving his second term on the Rockaway Township Council, where he has served as Council President and Vice President. Sackett grew up attending Rockaway's local public schools where his children now attend. In addition to being the owner of Family Martial Arts Center, he is an active volunteer coach for almost every extracurricular sport you can think of!

Jonathan has served on the education committee at Adath Shalom synagogue in Parsippany and is currently chair of Rockaway Democratic Committee. He is a graduate of Rutgers University with a degree in economics and accounting.

As commissioner, I will take seriously my role to serve constituents and the issues they care about like the affordable housing shortage, improving public transportation, small businesses, and economic development, driving down costs for municipalities, and preserving our parks and open spaces.

Your Voice Matters: Elect a County Commissioner Who Listens

CARRIE O'BRIEN COUNTY CLERK

Carrie was raised to serve her community and will continue doing so as Morris County Clerk.

Carrie started lobbying at the age of 5 when she went to Trenton to pass legislation to stop buses from idling in front of schools and started canvassing for local democrats before the age of 10.

At 15, Carrie started volunteering on her town's first aid squad, became a Licensed EMT at the age of 16, and by 18 she started her full-time career in massage therapy and currently serves on the executive board for Morris County Young Democrats.

At 20 years old, Carrie began studying at County College of Morris where she achieved an AA in Communications and then transferred to Southern Oregon University where she pursued a BS in Environmental Science, Policy, Business and Communications. While at the same time Carrie volunteered with nonprofits and worked with state legislators to introduce policy to protect fragile ecosystems of the Pacific Northwest. Carrie has a diverse background in emergency/crisis response, disaster preparedness, and sustainable development and she will put that experience to work as our Clerk, to keep Morris County moving in the right direction.

Thanks for your support.
